On the crown (Greek: Ὑπὲρ κτησιφῶντος περὶ τοῦ στεφάνου, hyper ktēsiphōntos peri tou stephanou) is the most famous judicial oration of the prominent orator Demosthenes. It was delivered against Philippus II of Macedon in the context of the Second Macedonian War. The work is divided into ten books, and is known for its dramatic and emotional style, which is considered one of the finest examples of ancient oratory. The speech is also notable for its use of rhetorical devices such as metempsychosis, which is a form of poetic license.

Demosthenes' use of dramatic devices such as metempsychosis and the use of the word 'crown' in the title of the speech, helps to create a sense of urgency and importance. The speech was written to rally support for the Athenian cause, and to inspire the audience to take action against the Macedonian threat. It is considered a masterpiece of ancient oratory and a key example of the use of oratory in ancient Greece.
